Without the frantic number of mice and cats the themes this game draw from just don't reach the same heights, despite the super cute sticker collection.. 10/10 has meow as a language option.. 10/10 has meow as a language option.. 10/10 has meow as a language option.. Great Puzzle Game. Just give it a try. I really hope to have more players in there soon.. Great Puzzle Game. Just give it a try. I really hope to have more players in there soon.. This is a cutesy action/puzzle game tablet ported into Steam. This is a ripoff of an old Dreamcast game called Chu Chu Rocket. The developers have added multiplayer to the game, although there's not much market for multiplayer puzzle games. Place arrows on the grid/maze and then watch the cat chase the mice along their predetermined course, following the directions of the arrows you set. The tablet port isn't badly done compared to most tablet ports, with some graphics and even resolution settings. Graphics are well polished "cutesy" blob graphics, which aren't great but they're not badly done. Gameplay is quite stale, being a ripoff of Chu Chu Rocket and some other games from a decade or so ago. Multiplayer doesn't add much. Overall this is the kind of thing that might be done in flash, the tablet-centric nature of the game should have been evident to the developers that it doesn't really belong on PC. The interface is quite clunky as a result of the tablet heritage. Overall while this isn't the worst tablet port I ever saw, it's not perfect and the gameplay is really where the game is a letdown. Because you can play these kinds of games for free in a web browser, I can't recommend anyone pays for this. If the game does seem to appeal to anyone, then the obvious choice would be to buy it on tablet and not PC, anyway.
